QUESTIONS

Getting the best card design possible, that means:

- The cards are comfortable to hold.
 - Up to 10 cards at a time.
- The cards are nice to shuffle.
- The cards are not too small, text is readable.
- The cards are not too big, so they won't fall out of your hands.
- The cards don't get damaged easily.

SUBJECT 1 – JORIS

- Joris's card choice:

Thick a4, 12cm.

- The cards are comfortable to hold.

No, they are on the big side.

- Up to 10 cards at a time.

They drop out of his hands.

- The cards are nice to shuffle.

No these are too big and the 8cm ones are too small.

- The cards are not small so you can always read the flavor text.

I am still able to read all the elements on the card and I will probably be able to when they are a bit smaller.

- The cards are not too big, so they won't fall out of your hands.

They did drop out of his hands.

SUBJECT 2 – MARCO

- Marco's card choice:

Thick a4, 12cm.

- The cards are comfortable to hold.

"Cards are comfy"

- Up to 10 cards at a time.

Not a problem at all for Marco

- The cards are nice to shuffle.

No, shuffling was a pain.

- The cards are not small so you can always read the flavor text.

The text was good to read.

- The cards are not too big, so they won't fall out of your hands.

Marco said they weren't too big, but most of the time he held his cards with 2 hands.

LAST QUESTION

- The cards don't get damaged easily.

After playing with the cards for a bit and handing them to different people it became clear the edges got bent even so far that the print got removed and it turned fully white.

We could fix this by rounding the edges or sealing the cards. The cards are also totally ruined if someone accidentally folds them. The solution to this would be to seal them or print them at an official card printer.
